

Artemis Koltsida (she/her) is an architect engineer NTUA and a mixed media artist. She started working in production companies at a young age, displaying her abilities from project planning to social media curation, fascinated by the focus on the detail that this field holds. While she is practicing architecture in the daytime, she is simultaneously running a DIY studio where she explores diverse projects, ranging from silkscreen printing and workshops to videos and 3D sculpting. Her artistic work is titled: “An analog to digital journey”, to reflect the multimedia, fluid character of her methods. She switches from one to another using whatever tools she needs to convey her message, with emphasis on bringing her visions to life: through animation, videos, (3D) printing, modeling, painting and other techniques.